FEAST OF CHANGE

In the fast-paced realm of corporate offices and co-working spaces, the persistent issue of uninspiring meals and restricted food choices has been a longstanding challenge

Introducing Plateup, an innovative B2B food stack technology platform that is revolutionizing the landscape of corporate dining experiences is this rice or a stone? The dal is incredibly watery. Oh, God, help me.

Plateup's mission is clear to enhance employee well-being and productivity by revolutionizing workplace dining. With a dedicated team of skilled chefs, Plateup ensures a delightful and diverse culinary journey, fostering a culture of healthy eating and increased workplace satisfaction.

CULINARY CROSSROADS

The corporate offices have designated a dedicated area for an internal canteen, offering the space rent-free. However, the continuous provision of a limited and repetitive menu, featuring dishes like chole ki sabji and dal rice, is adversely affecting employee satisfaction and overall well-being.

A recent study indicates that 72% of individuals favor ordering food from premium delivery apps, while only 18% choose the canteen options. This highlights an issue where corporate resources are invested without yielding positive outcomes or cultivating a satisfied workforce.

Co-Working Woes,

Co-working spaces, with ticket prices ranging from 12,000 to 1,00,000+ per seat, encounter a significant hurdle in the form of restricted food offerings.

Many co-working spaces offer only tea and coffee, leaving occupants with the hassle of bringing their own lunch or relying on costly external food delivery services. This lack of diverse food options within the workspace compels employees to venture outside in search of alternative dining solutions.
